Summer Reading

Dear Parents,

I sent a brown envelope home with your child on Tuesday. In the folder was their DRA independent reading level, a list of books at that level and a book from me for them to keep and read this summer. I would encourage them to practice their writing this summer as well as reading. Have them keep a journal of summer events and they could write summaries of the books they read.

There are lots of games on the computer to play while keeping up their reading and writing skills. Prodigy is a free game which levels the student and gives the parent a report of the skills being worked on by the child. Khan Academy is another resource. These sites also include math practice games.

I hope you will have a blessed, happy, and relaxing summer.

God Bless,

Mrs. Zumbrum
